GROWTH & AVERY,
The New Shoe Work, Flooring Block.
Few people are aware that right here in the valley the business of trapping fur-bearing animals is carried to a considerable extent and with good profit. A few weeks ago, riding some six miles from town up the river I met a couple of brothers who were building a boat which was almost completed and in which they intended to navigate for several miles the Salt and Gila rivers. Their principal game was beaver which they said were plentiful in those streams and which commanded a ready market. They had trapped beaver in Alaska for six years and found the Arizona variety much more valuable. Beaver skins were worth from $8 to $20 depending upon size and condition. Beside a number of pelts of that species they had an assortment of skins of mountain lion, fox, coon, bear, and lynx. It was they said possible to drift in their canoe for whole days and never see a sign of human habitation.

The Sunday closing situation is this:
