There has been considerable newspaper talk recently to the effect that John T. McCarty had worked up a scheme to rob an insurance company, and that he is not dead but is at present in Canada. It will be remembered that McCarty was supposed to have been killed by a bear in the Mogollon mountains. His wife is now living on a ranch in Pima county, having gone to that county after the funeral in Phoenix, which was largely attended. The Enterprise reporter, after thorough investigation, cannot find any evidence to justify the talk of fraud. It is simply sensationalism, and the logical deduction is that McCarty is really dead, and that the detectives of the insurance companies are at fault. At best, they seem to be basing their suspicion of fraud on the fact that they did not find two gold teeth in the jaw of the dead man.—Phoenix Enterprise.

Three years ago while at Martinsburg, W. Va., I was taken with cholera morbus, which was followed by delirium tremens. The doctor’s medicine did me no good. I was advised to get a bottle of Chamberlain’s Cholera, Diarrhoea and Delirium Tremens, which I did, and it cured me in six days and well. G. A. Morris, Embryville, Pa. Sold by the Williams Drug Co.

I am most respectfully yours for health, Ralph S. Meyers, 1430 Third-seventh street, Wheeling, W. Va. For sale by the Williams Drug Co.
